To Whom It May Concern,

I am very pleased to write this letter on behalf of Dr. Marty Henderson. I first became acquainted with Dr. Henderson in 2003, when he was exclusively performing ultrasounds for VetImage. As a general practitioner in an advanced small animal practice, I frequently require ultrasound images of the abdomen and thorax for a better understanding of my cases. I have been practicing ultrasonography myself intermittently for 8 years now, but until 2 years ago was not able to at my current practice due to the lack of a functioning machine. Relying on the skills of others, I had access to 4 individuals who could accomodate our case load. In honest truth, I trusted Dr. Henderson exclusively over the others, 2 of who were board-certified radiologists. I have worked with Dr. Henderson both at my practice and while traveling with him to many practices around the greater Los Angeles area. I have been able to observe his extraordinary sonographic skills demonstrated by the ability to detect extremely subtle differences in echotexture that ended up representing disease. I am confident that these subtleties would not have been detected by others, and certainly not by myself of those who practice ultrasonography less frequently. I also have been privileged to be taught by Dr. Henderson to enhance my own sonographic skills. Working on real cases, he balances academic learning with practical experience to provide me with confidence in my skills. He has taught me what I need know to acquire and accurately interpret my own images while providing a thorough understanding of artefacts and anatomy. I aspire to approach Dr. Henderson's skill level, and he has helped me work towards that goal with his patient assistance. Such a goal will never be achieved, however, as I feel that Henderson's skills are unparalleled with anyone else.

I cannot recommend Dr. Henderson more, and feel that anyone who is privilege to his knowledge should be confident that they are receiving the best ultrasonographic study. Should you wish to contact me directly, I encourage you to call me at my current practice, Santa Anita Small Animal Hospital, at 626-359-3281.

Best regards,

Andrea L. Shaw, PhD, DVM
